

GENERAL CONTENTS.

---

	PAGE
TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE, . . . . .	v
PREFATORY OBSERVATIONS, . . . . .	5

CHAPTER I.

DEFINITION OF THE THEOPNEUSTIA, OR DIVINE INSPIRATION.

Section I. . . . .	23
Section II. . . . .	24
Section III. . . . .	26
Section IV. . . . .	32
Section V.—On the Individuality of the Sacred Writers, .	38

CHAPTER II.

SCRIPTURAL PROOF OF THE DIVINE INSPIRATION.

Section I.—All Scripture is Divinely Inspired, . . . . .	58
Section II.—All the Prophetic Utterances are given by God, . . . . .	59
Section III.—All the Scriptures of the Old Testament are Prophetic, . . . . .	67
Section IV.—All the Scriptures of the New Testament are Prophetic, . . . . .	73
Section V.—The Examples of the Apostles, and of their Master, attest that in their view all the Words of the Holy Books are given by God, . . . . .	89

CHAPTER III.

BRIEF DIDACTIC ABSTRACT OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE DIVINE INSPIRATION.

Section I.—Catechetical Sketch of the Main Points of the Doctrine, . . . . .	106
Section II.—On the Adversaries and Defenders of the Doctrine, . . . . .	139

CHAPTER IV.

	Page
EXAMINATION OF OBJECTIONS.
Section I.—The Translations, . . . . .	153
Section II.—Use of the Septuagint Translation, . . . . .	161
Section III.—The Various Readings, . . . . .	164
Section IV.—Errors of Reasoning or of Doctrine, . . . . .	197
Section V.—Errors in the Narratives—Contradictions in the Facts, . . . . .	207
Section VI.—Errors contrary to Natural Philosophy, . . . . .	244
Section VII.—The Declarations of Paul himself, . . . . .	271

CHAPTER V.

	Page
EXAMINATION OF EVASIONS.
Section I.—Might not Inspiration pertain to the Thoughts only, without extending to the Words? . . . . .	275
Section II.—Should we except from Inspiration the Historical Books? . . . . .	286
Section III.—Will the apparent insignificance of certain Details in the Bible authorize their being excepted from Inspiration? . . . . .	306

CHAPTER VI.

ON SACRED CRITICISM, IN THE RELATIONS IT BEARS TO DIVINE INSPIRATION.
Section I.—Sacred Criticism is a Scientific Inquirer, and not a Judge, . . . . .	324
Section II.—Let Sacred Criticism be an Historian, not a Soothsayer, . . . . .	330
Section III.—Sacred Criticism is the Doorkeeper of the Temple, not its God, . . . . .	386

CHAPTER VII.

CONCLUSION.
Section I.—Retrospect, . . . . .	349
Section II. . . . .	355

ALPHABETICAL INDEX OF CONTENTS

FOR MINUTÆ AND REPEATED REFERENCES
CHIEFLY USEFUL.

	Page
Adversaries of Inspiration, . . . . .	139-145
Agobard referred to, . . . . .	140
Airey, Illustration from, . . . . .	251
Ambrose (St) quoted, . . . . .	304
Ammon on miraculous facts, . . . . .	144
Angels, their nature, office, &c., . . . . .	289-292
Anomeans oppose Inspiration, . . . . .	141
Apocrypha in Old Testament, not in New Testament, . . . . .	134
Apostles are prophets, &c. (See Chap. II. Analysis), . . . . .	134
Astrology, . . . . .	256
Athenagoras quoted, . . . . .	147
Augustine (St) quoted, 136 (and n. 3), 254, 305—Referred to, 150—On Matt. xxvii. 9, 10,—216—Illustration from, 345.
Authenticity of Scripture an historical question, . . . . .	129, 131, 138
Baumgarten on Inspiration, . . . . .	108
Bellarmino on authority of Scripture, . . . . .	136
Bengel referred to, . . . . .	167, 168, 195
" on 1 John v. 6, 7, . . . . .	193
Bernard (St) quoted, . . . . .	31
Bible neither human nor fallible (Pref. Obs.), 7—Its Divine brevity, 296—Its Divine charm, majesty, beauty, 53, 56, 293, 341—Its growing radiance, 359—Its own witness, 340—Divine care of, 167.
Bible Society condemned by Pope Leo XII. . . . .	123
Buchanan,—the Malabar Roll, . . . . .	171
Castello, . . . . .	143, 210
Celsus, . . . . .	206
Chateaubriand, Illustration from, . . . . .	49
Chinese, their cosmogony, . . . . .	253
Christ, our Lord Jesus—how he quoted Scriptures, 93—Compared to the written Word, 54—Resurrection, &c. (See Scripture Index.)
Chrysostom, (St), quoted, . . . . .	71 (n. 2), 357 (n. 3)
Church, Ancient, defends inspiration, 145-152—Catholic, care of New Testament, 132—Of Corinth. (See Scripture Index).—Of Rome. (See Rome, Trent, &c.)
Claud quoted, . . . . .	126