

CONTENTS.

PART I.

INVESTIGATION OF PRINCIPLES, pp. 1-196.

	Page
CHAPTER I.—The proper calling of a prophet, and the essential nature of a prophecy	5
CHAPTER II.—The place of prophecy in history, and the organic connection of the one with the other	20
CHAPTER III.—The proper sphere of prophecy—The church	42
CHAPTER IV.—The relation of prophecy to human freedom and behaviour; with a consideration of the question, how far prophecy is absolute or conditional in its announcements	58
CHAPTER V.—The prophetic style and diction	79
SECTION I.—Negatively: what is not the character of the prophetic style and diction	79
SECTION II.—The prophetic style and diction viewed positively—its more distinctive peculiarities—the ground of those peculiarities in the mode of revelation by vision	105
SECTION III.—First peculiarity of the style and diction of prophecy—poetical elevation	121
SECTION IV.—Second peculiarity of the prophetic style and diction—figurative representation	133

SECTION V.—Third peculiarity of the prophetic style and diction—the exhibition of events as present, or successive only in relation to each other, rather than as linked to definite historical epochs 166

CHAPTER VI.—The interconnected and progressive character of prophecy 177

PART II.

APPLICATION OF PRINCIPLES TO PAST AND PROSPECTIVE FULFILMENTS OF PROPHECY, pp. 197-485.

	Page
CHAPTER I.—The apologetic value of prophecy, or its place and use as an evidence for the facts and doctrines of Scripture	197
SECTION I.—Prophecies on the states and kingdoms which came into contact with Israel	203
SECTION II.—Prophecies respecting the Jewish people	220
SECTION III.—Prophecies respecting the Messiah	223
SECTION IV.—Prophecies respecting the destruction of Jerusalem	231
CHAPTER II.—The prophetic future of the Jewish people,	236
CHAPTER III.—The prophetic future of the church and kingdom of Christ	282
SECTION I.—The church and kingdom of Christ in their relation to the kingdoms of this world	283
The prophecies bearing on this subject in Daniel, chap. ii, p. 286 ; chap. vii. 294 ; the prophecies bearing on it in the Apocalypse, p. 303 ; the beast of the Apocalypse, with seven heads and ten horns, p. 304 ; the divine kingdom under the emblem of a Son of Man, p. 309 ; and a woman, p. 313 ; the opposition of the dragon to this kingdom, p. 316 ; then of the beast, after his deadly wound was healed, p. 323 ; finally of his ally, the lamb-horned beast or false prophet, p. 326.

	Page
SECTION II.—The prophetic future of the church and kingdom of Christ, in their relation to the character, working and fate of the antichristian apostacy	335

The typical antichrist in Daniel, p. 336 ; the antitypical antichrist there, p. 340 ; the descriptions of it in our Lord's discourses, the Acts, and the epistles of the New Testament, p. 343 ; the descriptions in the Apocalypse, first in the historical part, p. 363 ; then under the image of the temple court, and the Gentiles, p. 365 ; then under that of the whore and Babylon, p. 370 ; the judgment executed upon the corrupt power, p. 380.

SECTION III.—Supplementary : containing an outline of the general plan of the Apocalypse, from chap. v. to the close of chap. xix., with reference more especially to the distinctive character and relative order of the three great series of the seals, the trumpets, and the vials	393
--	-----

The seven-sealed book, p. 393 ; the different series of symbolic actions, whether synchronal or successive, p. 396 ; the seals considered individually, p. 403 ; the trumpets similarly considered, p. 407 ; the vials in like manner, p. 419 ; the visions in chap. xvii. to xix., p. 427 ; the mystical numbers in the book, p. 428.

SECTION IV.—The prophetic future of the church and kingdom of Christ, in their relation to His second coming, and the closing issues of His mediatorial kingdom	434
---	-----

The doctrine of the Lord's coming, as exhibited generally in Scripture, p. 435 ; the millennial state, as represented in Old Testament prophecy, p. 449, as represented in the Apocalypse, p. 451 ; the relation of the millennium to the Lord's final advent, p. 468 ; the war of Gog and Magog, p. 476 ; manifestation of Christ as judge, p. 482 ; the new heavens and the new earth, p. 483.