

Contents

Abbreviations	ix
Preface	xiii
1. Comparative Analysis of the Gospel of Mark	1
Interpretation of the Gospel of Mark	3
Tools for Analysis	5
Socio-Rhetorical Forms in Mark	7
Interrelation and Conflict of Forms	10
Goals	12
2. The Formal Structure of Mark	19
Repetitive Form in Series and Scenes	20
Passion Predictions and Three-Step Progressions	22
Three-Step Progressions and the Formal
Structure of Mark	25
The Outline of Mark	45
Conclusion	47
3. Conventional Repetitive Forms in Mark	53
Conventional Repetitive Forms in Prophetic
Biblical Documents	55
Minor Repetitive Forms in Xenophon's Memorabilia	60
Conclusion	68
4. The Introduction and the Initial Phase in the
Teacher/Disciple Cycle in Mark 1:1—3:6	75
Conventional Progressive Forms in the
Introduction to Mark: Mark 1:1—13	76
The Initial Phase in the Story of Jesus and His Disciples	82
Summons and Response in Greek Literature	87
Summons and Response in Hellenistic Jewish Literature	94
The Teacher/Disciple Relation in Rabbinic Literature
and Philostratus's Life of Apollonius of Tyana	101

The Initial Phase of the Teacher/Disciple Relationship: Mark 1:14—3:6	108
Markan Summons and Response as an Intermingling of Jewish and Greco-Roman Traditions	113
5. The Intermediate Phase in the Teacher/Disciple Cycle: Teaching and Learning in Mark 3:7—12:44	125
The Teaching/Learning Phase in Mark and Xenophon's Memorabilia	126
Teaching and Learning in the Hebrew Bible	128
Teaching and Learning in Plato's Dialogues and the Gospel of Mark	136
Teaching and Learning in Philostratus's Life of Apollonius of Tyana	147
The Distinctive Characteristics of the Teaching/Learning Phase	155
The Merger of Jewish and Greco-Roman Patterns and Forms in the Teaching/Learning Phase in Mark	166
6. The Final Phase of the Teacher/Disciple Relation: Farewell and Death in Mark 13:1—16:8	171
The Final Phase in Mark and Xenophon's Memorabilia	172
Mark 13 and Conventional Preparation for Future Action in Biblical and Jewish Literature	173
The Temple Dialogue in Greco-Roman Literature	178
The Arrest, Trial, and Death that Separates the Teacher from his Disciple/Companions	180
Biblical and Jewish Tradition of the Suffering Righteous One, the Teacher, and the King	185
Greco-Roman Tradition of the Suffering Teacher-King	187
The Conclusion of Mark	191
Summary	193
7. Messianic Expectation and Cultural Fulfillment: An Explanation of the Preservation of Mark	197
The Rhetoric of Repetitive Forms in Mark	198
The Rhetoric of Conventional Forms in Mark	199
The Rhetoric of Progressive Forms in Mark	201
The Preservation of the Gospel of Mark	209
Bibliography	215
Index of Passages	231