

Contents

---

Acknowledgments
Author's preface	7
An Assessment by G.E. Langemeijer	10
Introduction by Bernard Zylstra	14

---

1	What is philosophy?	35
2	"Out of the heart are the issues of life"	44
3	Immanence and transcendence	52
4	Archimedean point and arche	56
5	Ground motives of western thought	62
6	Why the name "Philosophy of the Cosmomic Idea?"	67
7	Law as boundary between God and creation	72
8	The meaning-character of temporal reality	76
9	Irreducibility of the modal aspects	84
10	Sphere sovereignty	91
11	The order of the modal aspects and their meaning-kernels	95
12	Analogies	104
13	Sphere universality. Isms	109
14	Antinomies and their origin	114
15	The subject-object relation	119
16	Opening process	126
17	The faith aspect in restrictive and expansive functions	132
18	The opening process of culture under the guidance of faith	137
19	Problems concerning the antithesis	142
20	What is time?	151
21	The problem of knowledge	160
22	Transcendental a prioris of human knowledge	172
23	Experience of identity	177
24	The relation between modal aspects and individuality structures	181
25	Structural types	186
26	Cultural entities. Introduction to enkapsis	190
27	Structures of human society	196
28	The structure of the family	205
29	The structure of marriage	211
30	The structure of the state	216
31	The problem of the christian state	227
32	The institutional church	239
33	Voluntary associations	250
34	Interindividual and intercommunal relationships	260
35	Enkapsis. The part-whole relation	269
36	Types of enkaptic interlacements	274
37	Enkaptic structural wholes	282
38	Sketch of a philosophical anthropology	287

---

Notes to the Introduction	296
Publications cited in the text	303
Glossary of terms	307
Index of Persons	316
Index of Subjects	318

---